RADIATION THERAPY
Clinch Valley Medical Center has recently upgraded our Cancer Treatment Center with Agility, the latest technological advancement in Radiation Oncology that is available in the region. Combining Agility with the IGRT (Image Guided Radiation Therapy) and IMRT (Intensity Modulated Radiation Therapy) allows the radiation beam to be directed at the tumor with greater precision, and at a much more intense strength, than ever before. In addition, Agility allows this increase in strength and accuracy, while reducing the chance of damaging surrounding healthy tissue. This ability can often reduce unwanted side effects so common with outdated technology.

The diagnosis of cancer can create an emotional/stressful time, bringing with it a wide variety of questions, each begging for an answer. Clinch Valley Medical Center takes the burden of travel out of the equation, ensuring that the patient receives the most effective treatment in the region, delivered by a highly trained and compassionate staff, right here at home.

CHEMOTHERAPY
Chemotherapy involves the use of drugs to kill cancer cells. Many side effects once associated with this therapy are now easily prevented or controlled. This enables you to enjoy a full, productive life while still receiving treatment.

As a Radiation Oncologist, I am excited at the opportunity to bring the Agility treatment technology to our cancer patients. We are the only radiation oncology treatment facility in the region with this advanced care. It is vital for cancer patients to have high-powered radiation, delivered precisely, to the tumor in order to achieve the best outcome possible. The fact that this technology is here at Clinch Valley Medical Center ensures that patients can stay where they are most comfortable for treatment – RIGHT HERE AT HOME!"
